

Removing the "Established Business Relationship" qualification from the fax regulations is definitely NOT a good move. This forces associations and other business to undertake massive paperwork documentation procedures of members and interested industry members . . many who contact us as ask for faxed information -- but we don't have that signed document for (event tho we have had an established relationship with them for many, many years (Please note that the interpretation regarding commercial faxes remains unclear in many cases. And since there has been little to NO publicity on this, my members don't really believe this pertains to them . . .) I have some grave concerns on this new rule both as it pertains to the Organization and how with a staff of 1.5 we will handle the increased (and what should be unnecessary additional workload) and how it will affect my members . . who still don't understand how it will affect them . . .because of the lack of mainstream publicity about the new ruling.
